

TPD: Internal Technical Courses and Seminars

Introduction Experienced analysts may offer internal technical courses and seminars on a variety of topics from various forensic disciplines.

The general intent of these technical courses and seminars is to inform the laboratory's professional staff of advances within a forensic discipline or provide technical information on issues that may be of concern to all analysts.

Attending a technical course or seminar Attendance at a technical course or seminar is not restricted and all analysts are encouraged to attend given their interest in the subject matter or the limitations of their respective work schedules.
